Democracy: Flawed but Preferable

Broadly speaking, there are two types of people who run for public office. Some run for idealistic reasons — they want to make a positive contribution to their communities, for example. They'd like to improve the way things work, and make sure needs are met for a broad spectrum of the population as well as represent various groups of people in a leadership role.

Others, however, have motives that aren't quite so pure. They run to satisfy their own egos. They like the spotlight that comes with the office, and enjoy the flattery that accompanies it. I find these types of politicians the worst; they run for office to be something rather than to do something.

Regardless of their motives, there are definite downsides to being a politician. I'm reminded of what former Congressman David Dreier said: "The higher you climb up the flagpole, the greater target you become." No doubt running for office makes you a target for scrutiny by the media and possibly hostile constituents (some of whom did not vote for you).

There are also many demands required for office, including time away from family, endless meetings, public appearances and campaign events. Low pay, the lack of civility, possible threat of violence and the constant challenge of asking (begging) for campaign donations also make that list.

And yet, with all these negatives, we still have citizens who gladly step forward and are willing to serve.

In Los Angeles County alone, there are more than 400 city councilmembers serving more than 10 million people in 88 cities. And when you add up all the people who serve on water boards, school districts, county offices, and those in the California State Assembly, State Senate and Congress — it's significant!

People often criticize our system of government as being imperfect, and we know it is. It's imperfect because the people serving us are imperfect, and on occasion they do make mistakes. I'm reminded that it's the people who are actually doing the work that make mistakes, and yet, our government filled with imperfect people is still, in general, dependable, reliable and able to accomplish some remarkable things.

To date I haven't found any other system of government that serves my community and me so well. I doubt you will either.

Ultimately, I'm grateful for the women and men who have chosen a life of dedicated public service. I tip my hat to each of them, in gratitude for their service. ○

Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass Steps Up to Lead Metro Board of Directors

By Elizabeth Smilor

"The top priority for Metro, without a question, is safety. To get ridership above the pre-pandemic levels, especially with women, we're going to have to address the safety concerns with Metro."

Karen Bass
Metro Board Chair
Los Angeles Mayor

From day one in her new role as Mayor of Los Angeles, Karen Bass has made urgently confronting homelessness her top priority. Now, as the new Metro Board Chair, she will help address that challenge and overall public safety not only on the streets but in stations, trains and buses.

Mayor Bass, who received the gavel from outgoing Chair Ara Najarian, will lead the Metro Board until June 30, 2024. In addition to improving safety and cleanliness on the transit system, Chair Bass will continue Metro's focus on growth in ridership and routes.

"The top priority for Metro, without a question, is safety. To get ridership above the pre-pandemic levels, especially with women, we're going to have to address the safety concerns with Metro," said Bass in a recent interview. "While we were all sequestered in our homes, unhoused people began using Metro for shelter and that went on for quite awhile. We have to address what is leading them to use Metro as shelter."

Chair Bass said she is collaborating well with the Metro Board and staff as well as all the stakeholders in the 88 cities and the unincorporated areas served by Metro. Metro is the second largest transit agency in the nation servicing more than 1,400 square miles with an annual ridership of nearly 270 million.

"Mayor Bass has brought to City Hall a commitment to collaboration to solve some of our region's most difficult challenges," said Metro Vice Chair and Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors Chair Janice Hahn. "I believe Mayor Bass is the right person for this moment, for this city, for this region and for this agency as so much of the work that needs to get done requires bringing a variety of stakeholders to the table to agree to work together to tackle challenges with innovative approaches that cross sectors, silos and fiefdoms."

Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass will serve as the Chair of the Metro Board of Directors until June 30, 2024. At left, she accepts the ceremonial gavel at the State of the Agency event flanked by Metro CEO Stephanie Wiggins, Metro Vice Chair and L.A. County Supervisors Chair Janice Hahn to her left, and outgoing Metro Chair and Glendale City Councilmember Ara Najarian on her right. Above, Chair Bass highlights her priorities to the audience in Union Station. Below, from left to right, Najarian, Wiggins, Bass and Hahn listen to another speaker.

She is the 43rd Mayor of Los Angeles and the first woman and second African American to be elected as the city's chief executive. A native Angeleno, Bass previously served in the California Assembly and most recently represented Los Angeles and Culver City in the U.S. House of Representatives.

As Chair, Bass said she wants to build upon the relationships Metro has begun with social services providers and other leaders across the county. She is also meeting with all the city mayors and their respective county supervisors to foster cooperation to benefit all of Los Angeles County.

"Mayor Bass has brought to City Hall a commitment to collaboration to solve some of our region's most difficult challenges."

"The safety concerns really revolve around homelessness, substance abuse and mental illness," said Bass. "Metro's greatest need is building out the relationships with other county agencies and departments. This is something that is relatively new to Metro and that I hope to build on."

Chair Bass said Metro's Ambassador program is a good start and that she hopes to broaden the scope of their duties with more training on administering Narcan to prevent substance overdose deaths and other social services.

"We must acknowledge that ridership is still down and the reduction is disproportionately among women riders who say they do not feel safe," said Bass in her State of the Agency address. "Almost 50 people have died on the Metro system just this year, so we are increasing our homeless outreach teams by 50 percent."

Safety patrols have increased on many lines and the Metro Board passed a motion for a feasibility study of an in-house police force. Bass said previous reports have shown that such a decision is more cost-effective and less complicated than coordinating with three different safety agencies – the Los Angeles Police Department, Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department and Long Beach Police Department.

On her first day in the Mayor's office, she declared a State of Emergency and launched a new approach to moving people inside, called Inside Safe. The $13 billion L.A. City budget signed by Mayor Bass in May includes an unprecedented $1.3 billion to address housing and homelessness.

"This is a truly historic City budget commitment because much of the state and federal pandemic money from the past couple of years is no longer available," Mayor Bass said in her State of the City address earlier this year. "The City must also lead with the land we own and control. As a result of my Executive Directive Number 3, city staff is right now working through more than 3,000 city-owned properties to identify those we will use for housing."

"Karen [Bass] will make a tremendous contribution to our Board's ongoing efforts to improve safety and create a better transit experience for all our Metro riders in the years ahead."

"We are going to jumpstart Metro's joint development program to increase Metro's production of housing units tenfold, so that we reach the 10,000 units of housing by 2031, half of which will be income restricted," said Chair Bass in her Metro State of the Agency address.

In her previous roles as a member of Congress and as Speaker of the State Assembly, Mayor Bass worked with Metro on many issues, including support for infrastructure projects and Metro's transition to a zero-emission transit fleet. In Congress, she championed a provision in the 2021 Bipartisan Infrastructure Law that allowed Metro to use its contracting authority to incorporate local hiring provisions on federally funded construction projects, which was not previously allowed.

"As the City of L.A.'s new mayor, Karen (Bass) brings a strong agenda to improve public safety and address the homeless

Metro is working alongside city and county leaders to create more housing. Last year, Metro placed 264 in permanent housing and 312 in interim housing, said Metro CEO Stephanie Wiggins. She said the goal is to place the 900 people sheltering on Metro into housing by this time next year. Additionally, Metro is building new housing near transit as it expands its service.

Metro Transit Center in 2024 and the development of the East San Fernando light rail along Van Nuys Boulevard.

"At Metro, we need to continue our progress with development on track and on schedule so we will be ready for 2026 (FIFA World Cup) and 2028 (Summer Olympic and Paralympic Games)," said Bass. "I'm very happy with the progress so far."

Finally, Bass said the system must be convenient and fast. By the end of the year, all rail lines will run at 8-minute intervals during peak hours and every 10 minutes off-peak, she said.

"First, it must be safe. I want transit to address the needs of Angelenos. I want Angelenos to see transit not as a last resort – not because their car might be broken down, and in the shop – but as a primary choice," said Bass. "I want people to take Metro because it is convenient and takes them where they want to go. That's not going to happen unless we deal with the safety issues." ○

Metro Celebrates Successes

The Transit Agency Goes into 'Growth Mode'

By Elizabeth Smilor

For Metro, the past year was marked by both exceptional progress and great challenges as the agency continues to address lingering challenges from the COVID-19 pandemic that are affecting transit agencies across the country. Looking ahead, Metro leadership is optimistic.

"It's our intention to build a service to inspire Angelenos to do what many consider unimaginable, choose to ride transit instead of driving their beloved cars," said CEO Stephanie Wiggins at the annual State of the Agency event in Union Station in July. "When I consider that we delivered 269 million rides last year and that our ridership grew in 11 of the last 12 months, I feel confident we can connect Angelenos and inspire them to make us the first choice for transportation."

At the event, the ceremonial gavel was passed from Ara Najarian to new Metro Board Chair and Los Angeles Mayor Karen Bass. Najarian, who is the longest-serving member of the Board, reflected on his year of leadership.

"I was honored to serve as the Board Chair for Metro and I am extremely proud of what our Board was able to accomplish during my tenure," Najarian said. "While this last year clearly presented us with major challenges and opportunities to improve, I think we met that challenge and are turning the corner on needed improvements. We put plans into motion that will certainly leave a legacy for how Metro better meets its customers' needs in the coming years. I'm very proud of that."

Metro's transportation plan includes the completion of one transit project each year between now and 2028, the year

Los Angeles will host the Olympic and Paralympic Games. Last year, Metro opened an unprecedented two new rail projects: the K Line in Inglewood and the Regional Connector in downtown Los Angeles. With three new stations in L.A.'s downtown core, the Regional Connector has changed the way people move across the region and created one-seat transit from Long Beach to Azusa and from East L.A. to Santa Monica on the newly named A and E lines. And by the end of 2024, the K Line will connect to the C Line and to the LAX/Metro Transit Center.

"Ridership is 13 percent higher on the new lines (A and E) through the new regional connector," said Wiggins. "At the opening of the Regional Connector, I felt hope that transit could be the great connector that L.A. needs."

Metro also stepped up its bus service by hiring 1,000 new bus operators and adding more bus priority lanes. Metro will continue adding priority lanes, including some underway along La Brea Avenue between Sunset and Olympic boulevards, and has increased safety patrols and cleaning on the buses.

"In this next year, we will continue to put people first," Wiggins said. "We've shown that we can make big improvements to our system. And now we're in growth mode. This year, our primary goal is to earn back our riders and regain their trust."

To earn that trust, Metro continues to focus on the customer experience with a multi-layered approach to addressing safety, mental illness and the unhoused on the system.

[Metro Celebrates, Page 8]

Metro opened an unprecedented two rail projects last year. The Regional Connector in downtown L.A., shown at left, will give riders one-seat transit from Long Beach to Azusa and from East L.A. to Santa Monica. Above, the K Line opened in Inglewood and by the end of 2024 will connect to the C Line and the LAX/Metro Transit Center.

"I was a skeptic about our multi-layered approach, but I realized that this is the best way to ensure the safety of all," said Najarian. "It's a balanced approach that applies the right resource for each issue. We now have more than 300 Ambassadors on the transit system to add more eyes and ears for our customers."

"While this last year clearly presented us with major challenges and opportunities to improve, I think we met that challenge and are turning the corner on needed improvements."

Ara Najarian
Outgoing Metro Chair

The Metro Ambassadors have had 365,000 customer interactions and work alongside transit security by reporting issues they see on the system. Metro's 2024 budget includes nearly $300 million for safety improvements, $200 million to improve cleanliness and $14 million for homeless outreach.

Finally, Metro is changing the fare system to make ridership more accessible. Last year, the GoPass program that provides free fares for K-12 and community college students grew to an all-time high. There were 16.7 million rides using GoPass, which more than tripled the number of GoPass rides the previous year. Additionally, Metro signed up 89,036 people for the LIFE low-income fare program in the past fiscal year, almost doubling the number of people in the program.

On July 1, Metro introduced fare capping, a new way to pay that makes riding more convenient and less expensive. A regular fare remains $1.75 with two hours of free transfers, but now the fare is capped at $5 per day or $18 in a seven-day period.

"We are determined to make public transportation the preferred choice for all," said Wiggins. "If recent challenges and changing circumstances caused you to step away from public transportation, I want you to know that we are fully committed to providing an exceptional transit experience for everyone." ○

Proudly Serving the Community Since 1923

Following World War I, Los Angeles County experienced extraordinary residential and industrial growth. As a result, there was a dire need for more wastewater (sewage) treatment to protect public health and the environment. The Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts were formed in 1923 to solve this problem with a coordinated, regional solution.

The concept of our agency originated in the minds of Albert Kendall Warren, Assemblymember Hugh Pomeroy and LA County Board of Supervisors Chair, R.F. McClellan. Mr. Warren developed the plan for a regional sewer system and was our first chief engineer.

100 years later, we now serve 5.5 million people with 11 wastewater treatment plants and over 1,400 miles of sewer. We are proud to be celebrating our centennial and reaffirm our commitment to serving LA County.

Anthony Rendon

Reflects on his Seven-Year Term as California Assembly Speaker

By Elizabeth Smilor

"... I believe in democratic theory and that democracy produces the best outcomes."

Anthony Rendon

California Assembly Speaker Emeritus Anthony Rendon, a Los Angeles native, describes himself as an optimist, a realist and, most of all, a believer in democracy.

"In studying philosophy and political theory, I believe in democratic theory and that democracy produces the best outcomes," said Rendon, who said that guides his leadership style. "I didn't lead the Assembly with a heavy hand when it comes to legislation. I provided chairs with the tools they needed to make decisions. To have one person who is not elected by the entire state weigh in more than anyone else elected by a similar number of people doesn't seem right."

Rendon, whose term as speaker ended in June, was the second-longest serving speaker in state history. Reflecting on his time as speaker, Rendon said he knows the legislative body has changed.

"The Assembly has been radically transformed," he said. "There were a lot internal accomplishments – from cost-of-living adjustments to gender pay parity to new departments – that will lead to greater efficiencies and to more effective government."

Above, Rendon stands along the banks of the Los Angeles River in his district, where he's supported an ongoing revitalization. Below, Rendon with his wife, Annie.

Rendon was elected to the Assembly in 2012 and became speaker in 2016. He lives in Lakewood and represents the 62nd Assembly District, which includes nine cities – Bellflower, Huntington Park, Lakewood, Lynwood, Maywood, Paramount, South Gate, and Walnut Park. He terms out of office in November of 2024.

Rendon says in the short-term he will continue to represent his district and enjoy raising his 4-year-old daughter Vienna with his wife, Annie. He plans to run for state treasurer in 2026.

"I went into office because of cuts to early childhood education, so that fiscal piece has always been really important," Rendon said. "I'm super proud of our rainy day fund. Our savings account is larger than about 33 states' budgets. So, that fiscal piece has a lot of implications for the quality of people's lives and for public policy."

In addition to successfully increasing funding for early childhood education, Rendon says the legislature has accomplished a lot for the well-being of the state and planet.

"Our efforts on resource management – from parks to water to climate change – are lasting and have led to a cultural shift within California government whereby I think there's going to be an expectation that we're going to continue to address those issues."

Close to home, he's particularly proud of the efforts to revitalize the Los Angeles River, which began in 2015 when he authored Assembly change reduction goals, a landmark $52 billion transportation funding plan, an extension of California's cap-and-trade program, and a first-of-its-kind clean air measure. In his first term in the Assembly, Rendon authored Proposition 1, the $7.5 billion state water bond that has funded many infrastructure and cleanup projects.

Rendon led the Assembly through several challenges, including the COVID-19 pandemic and the #MeToo movement.

"We tried to address these concerns in a way that really changed the culture. It was important to make lasting changes," Rendon said. "With sexual harassment claims within the Assembly, we took the decision-making power out of the hands of the speaker, and formed an independent panel."

The legislature certainly was not immune from the effects of the pandemic.

"We were severely weakened by COVID. We as a body chose to leave," Rendon said. "Every Rendon has served in the Assembly since 2012 and was speaker for seven of those years. He represents cities in Southeast Los Angeles County and has successfully advocated for legislation to improve water quality, air quality, health and education. form of government has an executive branch, but only democracies have a legislative branch and the weakening of the legislative branch weakens democracy. We are still building back up."

"Politicians are taught to be optimistic. I think we need to be realistic about public policy and our expectations."

Anthony Rendon

Under his leadership, the legislature passed critical legislation to address the health and economic crises of the pandemic, including multiple eviction moratoriums, legislation to support families and small businesses, and more.

The year he was first elected to the Assembly was also the year voters extended the term limit to 12 years. Rendon said that led to a class of legislators who recognized the value of expertise and who developed statewide relationships and knowledge.

"We have to lead a state with incredible diversity. It is very important to listen to and represent your district, but also to think from a statewide perspective," said Rendon, then naming off about a half dozen legislators and how each district is different. "You have to think outside of yourself and realize it's a really vast and diverse state."

So, is Rendon still optimistic about California and state politics?

"Politicians are taught to be optimistic. I think we need to be realistic about public policy and our expectations," he concludes. "I think we get into trouble when we think the future is going to be all rosy. In governance, every day is a moving target and you never know what you're going to encounter. I think this state has great potential to do good and to thrive. It also has gotten into some very problematic situations. I think we need to be vigilant. But, yes, I'm optimistic." ○

Get Connected to City of Industry

Business-Friendly Municipality Invests in the Region

By Elizabeth Smilor

"Our City's regional proximity provides significant advantages for our businesses, residents, and those individuals who work in Industry... ."

Cory Moss
Mayor, City of Industry

Looking forward, the City of Industry and the Industry Business Council are making connections to foster success for all the companies and employees in the San Gabriel Valley city.

"This year's theme is 'Get Connected' which emphasizes the numerous resources and relationships that are available throughout the City and our partners at the Industry Business Council (IBC)," said City of Industry Mayor Cory Moss at the annual State of the City event. "These resources help support our business community, nonprofit organizations, and our residents."

The City of Industry boasts more than 3,000 businesses that employ over 67,000 people, and supports local nonprofits and regional infrastructure.

"The City of Industry is one of the most supportive cities for businesses. I've watched the city grow from fields to a thriving place where everyone wants to do business," said Reon Roski, CEO of Majestic Realty that has been based in Industry since 1985. She was at the event with several Majestic leaders including her father Ed Roski Jr., who is President and Chairman of the Board.

The City of Industry was named as the number two most business-friendly city in Los Angeles County last year by BizFed, a business alliance with more than 240 members.

"Receiving this recognition was a tremendous achievement that highlights our dedication and commitment to supporting our business community. It also serves as a reminder that Industry is a city like no other," Moss said.

The State of the City event at the Pacific Palms Resort was attended by about 300 business, organization, city and regional leaders. Mayor Moss, IBC Director Joanne McClaskey, City Manager Josh Nelson and City Engineering Manager Mathew Hudson were among the speakers. Representatives from area schools, nonprofits and events had informational displays for guests before the luncheon.

Mayor Moss highlighted the many ways the City connects to both its businesses and the region through streamlined support systems, networking events and a growing digital presence.

"Our City's regional proximity provides significant advantages for our businesses, residents, and those individuals who work in Industry as we offer easy access to transportation, major airports, and shipping ports. This makes Industry the prime location to connect Southern California with the rest of the world to facilitate goods movement," said Moss. "Now, digital connections have become one of the most important ways for people and businesses to stay connected and share ideas and information. We want to make sure we are connected through social media to promote all the great successes in our region."

"The City of Industry is one of the most supportive cities for businesses. I've watched the city grow from fields to a thriving place where everyone wants to do business."

Nelson and Hudson gave the audience an update on local and regional projects and improvements, including road work and the introduction of smart city infrastructure. McClaskey reviewed IBC accomplishments and goals.

"Looking back at 2022, it was a great year of connecting, moving forward and engagement with our community. We hosted over 25 luncheons and training events with record attendance," she said. McClaskey highlighted the new IBC web site, digital connection tools, partnerships with educators and employment organizations and the Made in City of Industry initiative.

"We worked with the City's manufacturers to help create programs and systems to connect with potential employees and promote the City's manufacturers," said McClaskey. "This new system is ready to be expanded to not only promote manufacturers, but to include all business sectors."

Joanne McClaskey

In addition to acknowledging many successful businesses in the City, Mayor Moss also highlighted organizations the City proudly supports including Delhaven Community Center, Megan's Wings, Priceless Pets, the San Gabriel Valley LGBTQ Center, Pacific Crest Drum and Bugle Corps, the Gabriel Foundation, and the Industry Sheriff's Youth Activities League.

"We have a symbiotic relationship with the City of Industry. They guided us through the pandemic and financially support us," said Izzeldine Osman, Associate Director of Delhaven Community Center.

"Our Because We Care program is filling a critical need for mental health support in the community that our leadership and that of the city recognized together."

"Looking back at 2022, it was a great year of connecting, moving forward and engagement with our community."

Finally, Moss looked ahead to events in 2023 including the Industry Hills Charity Pro Rodeo and YAL Terror Trail in October, and the Land of the Free Foundation's annual Veteran's Day event in November.

"We look forward to getting connected to businesses, employees, community organizations and residents all year long." ○

Industry's Early Bond Payoff Benefits Region

The City of Industry is proud to be the “Economic Engine of the San Gabriel Valley” and one of the most business-friendly cities in Los Angeles County. In 2022, Industry reached a major milestone that will further help residents, businesses and the region.

Mayor Cory Moss announced that in August 2022 the City of Industry paid off the last three of seven property tax-based bonds ahead of schedule. The result: more than $85 million in annual revenue will go back to taxpayers, businesses and community partners.

“Our Finance Director Yamini Pathak worked closely with City Manager, Josh Nelson, to take a proactive approach to pay off our Property Tax Override. We are proud to deliver on the success of our financially sound policies to save Industry property owners over $49 million annually, that’s nearly 4 million dollars per month that can be reallocated to supporting jobs and ensuring more employment opportunities,” Moss said. “By no longer levying city property taxes, the City of Industry is projected to deliver over $36 million annually to local school districts, special districts, and the county.”

The City of Industry has more than 3,000 businesses that employ over 67,000 people. The City is consistently named as one of the top five most business-friendly cities in Los Angeles County by BizFed, a business alliance with more than 240 members.

“This action by the Industry City Council has resulted in significant savings to hundreds of businesses in the city that have property taxes pass through in lease costs,” said CEO Reon Roski of Majestic Realty. “It is a clear example of a city that is focused on the success of businesses that provide valuable jobs to the San Gabriel Valley region.”

The bonds included General Obligation Bonds and Tax Allocation Revenue Bonds, said Nelson. “I am proud of our Finance Department, who at the direction of the City Council, took a proactive approach to accelerate the redemptions of these bonds,” he said. “The removal of this tax lien from the tax rolls is especially important now as we work to grow the regional economy following the challenges faced over the past several years.”

Josh Nelson

Industry voters in 1978 approved the Industry Property Tax Override for the issuance of General Obligation Bonds not to exceed $250 million. Since then, the city levied the override of approximately 0.73750 percent ($.7375 of $100 taxable value) on all taxable Industry properties.

The bond monies were used to improve infrastructure, including roads, railroad crossings and overpasses to serve residents, businesses and the movement of goods, said Moss. ○

When Spanish explorers first entered the area now known as Hollywood, Native Americans were living in the canyons of the Santa Monica Mountains. Before long, the Indians had been moved to missions and the land which Hollywood now occupies was divided in two by the Spanish Government. Acreage to the west became part of Rancho La Brea and settlements to the East became Rancho Los Feliz.

Foothill Gold Line

The Foothill Gold Line light rail project will extend the Metro A Line to the cities of Glendora, San Dimas, La Verne, Pomona, Claremont and Montclair - and will be built in phases. The project segment from Glendora to Pomona is fully funded by LA County's Measures M & R and state funds (including SB1), and major construction is on track to be completed in early-January 2025. Funding is being sought to complete the project to Claremont and Montclair.

L.A. County Sanitation Districts Celebrate 100 Years of Service

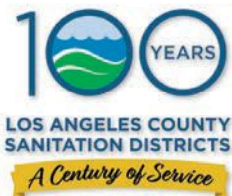

A 1928 photo of the Joint Disposal Plant (now known as the Joint Water Pollution Control Plant) in Carson.

By Elizabeth Smilor

"In 2023, we are honored to be celebrating our centennial. The agency was formed on three pillars – regional governance, sound engineering and a focus on service."

Robert C. Ferrante
L.A. County Sanitation Districts'
Chief Engineer and General
Manager. 2019-Present

The ceremonial shovel from the groundbreaking of Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts' first sewer, nearly 100 years ago, sits in the office of the agency's Chief Engineer and General Manager, Robert C. Ferrante. The shovel is a reminder of the Sanitation Districts' humble origin and long history, and the agency's essential role in the development of Los Angeles County.

"In 2023, we are honored to be celebrating our centennial," said Ferrante. "The agency was formed on three pillars – regional governance, sound engineering and a focus on service. Those three elements continue to work today."

For 100 years, the Sanitation Districts have been meeting the changing needs of their vast service area. From building wastewater and solid waste infrastructure to pioneering water reclamation and renewable energy production, the agency has grown and embraced innovation to serve 5.5 million residents in 78 cities and unincorporated portions of Los Angeles County.

"Protecting public health was our original priority, but through the years we've evolved to serve new community needs as they arose," Ferrante said. "Our history demonstrates that we are not a static agency, but a responsive one."

Formation in 1923

The concept of the Sanitation Districts originated in the minds of Albert Kendall Warren, Assemblymember Hugh Pomeroy, and County Board of Supervisors Chair R.F. McClellan. Warren developed the plan for a regional sewer system to serve Los Angeles County and was the Sanitation Districts' first Chief Engineer. In September 1925, the agency broke ground on its first sewer, the Wright Road Trunk Sewer, just north of Maywood. Today, the sewer system has grown to include over 1,400 miles of sewer throughout the county.

"That very first project demonstrated the importance of regional cooperation, had a solution grounded in sound engineering, and served the community by protecting public health," Ferrante said.

The Sanitation Districts' first sewage treatment plant, the Joint Disposal Plant (JDP), began operation on Feb. 4, 1928, processing two million gallons per day (mgd) of sewage. The flow into the plant increased to about 10 mgd in its first two years of operation and to 22 mgd by 1937. Today, the Joint Water Pollution Control Plant (JWPCP) is located on the site of the old JDP.

Recent Innovations

The JWPCP is host to major improvements and innovations. A key part of the Sanitation Districts' wastewater infrastructure is two tunnels that carry cleaned water six miles from the JWPCP to an ocean outfall system two miles offshore from Royal Palms Beach in San Pedro. These tunnels are over 60 and 80 years old and cannot be removed from service for inspection or repair. In 2019, after years of planning and environmental review, the agency began construction of the Clearwater Project to protect local waterways by addressing aging infrastructure. Utilizing a modern tunnel boring machine, the project will build a new seven-mile long, 18-foot internal diameter tunnel that will replace the two existing tunnels. The Clearwater Project is scheduled for completion in 2027.

"This project, despite being one of the most expensive construction projects ever undertaken by the Sanitation Districts, was fully supported by the Boards of Directors, which demonstrated their steadfast commitment to effective and reliable wastewater treatment," said Grace Hyde, who served as the Sanitation Districts' Chief Engineer and General Manager from 2012-2019. "The large, innovative projects that the Sanitation Districts have implemented throughout the years have, at their core, been a successful collaboration between the Districts' directors,

"The large, innovative projects that the Sanitation Districts have implemented throughout the years have, at their core, been a successful collaboration between the Districts' directors, committed staff and the communities that the agency serves each day."

and distribute that water across the region, primarily for groundwater replenishment. As proposed, the program would provide enough water for 1.5 million people and more than double the amount of water recycled by the Sanitation Districts. It would become one of the largest water recycling projects in the world.

"Pure Water Southern California is, by its nature, a regional project. It really demonstrates how regional collaboration continues to work," Ferrante said. "It's also our last untapped source of water to recycle. The project is a key part of our future, which is all about sustainability."

60 Years of Water Recycling

The JWPCP is the last untapped source, because of the Sanitation Districts' pioneering history in water reclamation and recycling. A 1949 Sanitation Districts' report on Water Reuse led to construction of several inland water committed staff and the communities that the agency serves each day."

The Sanitation Districts are developing Pure Water Southern California in partnership with the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California at the JWPCP. This program, now in the environmental planning phase, would purify the cleaned water produced at the JWPCP recycled water program," said Hyde. "The importance of the program cannot be overstated because it is providing a resource greatly needed during years of increasing droughts and climate change."

"The Whittier Narrows WRP set the standard and paved a course for others across the country and world to follow," said Ferrante. "This project is referenced time and time again as the first building block to the expansion and water for groundwater replenishment since 1962 and was designated a historic civil engineering landmark in 1972 by the American Society of Civil Engineers, L.A. Section. By 2022, the Sanitation Districts had produced over 1.2 trillion gallons of water that were beneficially reused.

"During my career, I saw our program grow into the nation's largest construction of other water reclamation plants modeled after it and to the system that we have today."

Converting Waste into Energy

The Sanitation Districts have also led the way in converting waste into energy. In 1971, the Sanitation Districts used gas from the Palos Verdes Landfill to run a generator and power a Christmas tree. This event received extensive media coverage — including a visit from then Prince Charles — and raised awareness of renewable energy. In 1987, the Sanitation Districts started operation of the Puente Hills Gas to Energy Facility. At its peak, this facility converted gas from the Puente Hills Landfill into enough electricity for 50,000 homes.

In 2016, California passed laws requiring cities to divert organic waste from landfills. To help member cities comply with these requirements, the Sanitation Districts developed a food waste recycling program that primarily uses existing infrastructure. As a result, this system was built quickly and provides low-cost service. The program produces green energy and nutrient-rich material that is converted into compost.

"We're a net reducer of greenhouse gas emissions. Our tagline is 'converting waste into resources' and that is our direction," Ferrante said. "Our goal is to keep reusing water and help make our community as sustainable as possible."

Clockwise from top left: The White Point tunnel was placed in operation in September 1937. Final inspection prior to use was made by (from left to right): District Counsel Hugh Gordon; District Chief Engineer A. K. Warren; Assistant Chief Engineer A M Rawn; an unknown man; Floyd Shoefner, tunnel contractor; an unknown man; and Charles T. Leeds, consulting engineer, Los Angeles. Focusing on Keeping Rates Affordable

"Implementing and operating environmentally judicious and economically prudent infrastructure was the paramount goal to be met to the greatest degree possible," said James Stahl, who was the Sanitation Districts' Chief

"I was both proud and grateful to be part of an exemplar team of directors and staff dedicated to serving the wastewater and solid waste management needs of its customers."

Engineer and General Manager from 2000-2007 and worked for the agency for almost 38 years. "I was both proud and grateful to be part of an exemplar team of directors and staff dedicated to serving the wastewater and solid waste management needs of its customers."

Through all the years of innovation and investments and despite a few unsuccessful endeavors, the Sanitation Districts have kept wastewater and solid waste service rates among the lowest in the nation.

"Without trying, there can be no innovation. And keeping prices low is a big deal because the money saved by residents and businesses can be invested in other improvements and keeps our economy going," Ferrante said.

What does that shovel in his office really symbolize? Pride. Pride in service. Pride in integrity. Pride in innovation.

"Since the first sewer opened in 1925, Sanitation Districts' employees have been out there day in and day out, every day," Ferrante concludes. "Their job not only protects the public health and environment, but converts waste into resources for a more sustainable future." ○

Servicon: Celebrating 50 Years of Service

Specialized Commercial Cleaning Company Proud of Its L.A. Heritage

"Our employees were essential workers throughout the pandemic and we continue to focus on their well-being and success as we grow our business."

Laurie Sewell
Servicon President and CEO

Servicon, Southern California's leading hospital environmental services provider and commercial cleaning services company, serves clients by caring for their employees.

"We are experts who perform our duties with compassion and a focus on our employees first and foremost, especially during the pandemic when our employees were the first line of defense in Los Angeles County healthcare facilities and for our aerospace clients," said Communications Director and member of the ownership team Gregory Mahdesian.

The company is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year, led by President and CEO Laurie Sewell. Servicon, which is headquartered in Culver City, offers specialized cleaning and facility maintenance services for the aerospace, healthcare, government and municipal, life science, and commercial sectors nationally. It was founded in Los Angeles in 1973 by Richard Mahdesian, the son of Armenian refugees. Servicon remains family owned and is also women owned and operated.

Richard Mahdesian

"From the beginning, our purpose has been to elevate the industry and provide healthy environments for people to thrive," said Sewell. "Our employees were essential workers throughout the pandemic and we continue to focus on their well-being and success as we grow our business."

Many of Servicon's clients praise the company's professionalism, exceptional service and efficient response to challenges. "Servicon executed a flawless transition in taking over the GMP cleaning of our cleanrooms and office areas in California. I was impressed with their attention to detail during the onboarding process and consistent supervision even many months after start-up. Our quality Servicon offers specialized cleaning and facility maintenance services for the aerospace, healthcare, government and municipal, life science, and commercial sectors nationally. The company is based in Culver City and is family- and women-owned and operated. In addition to taking pride in their service, Servicon cares for its employees and the communities in which they live. In 2020, the company started a philanthropic foundation called ServiconCares, which partners with Southern California nonprofits to fulfill community needs.

positions. Sewell began as a college intern before taking a position in payroll, working her way up to President in 2007 and CEO in 2014.

"We recognize that by caring for our employees, we elevate our industry and also the communities where we live and work," said Board Chairman Michael Mahdesian, who spent most of his career in public policy and politics. In the 1990s, he served as USAID Bureau Deputy overseeing international humanitarian aid. In 2020, he founded ServiconCares, a philanthropic foundation that both donates to and partners with groups in Southern California to sustainably improve the communities where Servicon employees reside.

In greater Los Angeles, where four generations of the Mahdesian family were born, Servicon has supported such facilities with stringent requirements like ours," wrote Facility Manager Eddie Diaz of InstilBio.

An assistant director of project management of a large Southern California municipality wrote: "I have come to really appreciate as the Los Angeles Mission to provide jobs and services for those transitioning from the unhoused population. ServiconCares funds five $15,000 undergraduate scholarships per year at Charles R. Drew University with priority given to students from South Los Angeles.

Servicon also is dedicated to sustainability and is the pioneer in green cleaning. The company's state-of-the-art training center is LEED Platinum-certified and they have won numerous sustainability awards.

"For us, sustainability is more than a buzzword; it is a way of life and part of our DNA," said Gregory Mahdesian, who was recently named to the advisory board of Climate Resolve.

Founder Richard Mahdesian's philosophy was "Doing well by doing right," which has sustained Servicon's success as a recognized industry leader for 50 years. Servicon will continue to care for its people and they in turn will better serve Servicon's clients and elevate the communities in which they live and work. ○

San Gabriel Basin Water Quality Authority: Advocating for Clean Groundwater for 1.4 Million Residents

"Our coordination of this cleanup has made a difference in protecting and restoring this vital groundwater basin and our efforts will continue to ensure a clean, safe and reliable water supply."

Randy Schoellerman
Executive Director
WQA

In the past year, several factors have reaffirmed the vital role of the San Gabriel Basin Water Quality Authority in the ongoing cleanup of the groundwater basin. We have received additional funding, an extension of the agency, and proposed regulatory standards to address emerging contaminants as our mission of basin restoration and the prevention of future contamination continues.

For a second consecutive year, we received $10 million in federal funding thanks to the efforts of our U.S. Representatives and Senators. The federal funds were appropriated into the San Gabriel Basin Restoration Fund (Restoration Fund) following more than a decade without federal funds. Congress has authorized $125 million for the Restoration Fund, of which $94.5 million has been appropriated and allocated to cleanup projects by the WQA.

We are currently pursuing additional federal funds for fiscal year 2024. This funding helps the WQA leverage funding from the state and lessens the burden on local ratepayers. In addition to seeking federal and state funding for the cleanup, the WQA garners funds from the parties responsible for the groundwater contamination.

The WQA was established by the State Legislature in 1993 to develop, finance, and implement groundwater treatment programs in the San Gabriel Basin after contaminants were identified in the late 1970s.

There are 33 active groundwater treatment plants in the San Gabriel Basin. The WQA has coordinated cleanup efforts that have resulted in the treatment of nearly 2 million acre-feet of water. An acre-foot is equal to 325,551 gallons. Though variable, about 200,000 acre-feet of water is pumped from the Basin annually and used as domestic supply.

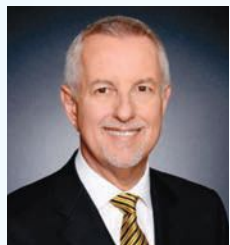

As Congresswoman Grace Napolitano recently said: "Without the WQA, this cleanup wouldn't have come this far." We appreciate this recognition, but also know our job is not done. This fact was highlighted by the decision of the California State Legislature in 2022 to extend the life of the Authority to July 1, 2050. Prior legislation extended us to July 1, 2030, but we and local stakeholders recognized that we have certain financing and projects agreements that go beyond 2030.

Both the changing climate and the emergence of new groundwater contaminants illustrate the continued need for the WQA for a resilient and sustainable future. Today, a lot of focus is on PFAS (per- and poly-fluoroalkyl substances) widely used long-lasting chemicals that break down very slowly.

On March 14, the U.S. EPA announced the proposed National Primary Drinking Water Regulation, which would establish legally enforceable levels called Maximum Contaminant Levels for six PFAS compounds in drinking water.

PFAS, considered “forever” chemicals because they remain in the environment, were compounds produced mainly by the 3M and DuPont companies and used by them and a variety of other manufacturers to produce everything from Teflon for pots and pans to Scotchgard for fabric protection.

On March 17, the WQA filed a lawsuit against 3M, DuPont and other companies seeking to recover the costs of cleaning up PFAS from the Main San Gabriel Basin. It is part of our mission to pursue responsible parties for the cost of the cleanup and PFAS has been detected in numerous wells. By joining hundreds of other cities, states and water agencies in filing suit against these companies, we are fulfilling our mandated role.

Our coordination of this cleanup has made a difference in protecting and restoring this vital groundwater basin and our efforts will continue to ensure a clean, safe and reliable water supply. ○

Our History in the San Gabriel Basin

After severe groundwater contamination was detected in the San Gabriel Basin and the EPA designated four Superfund sites in the area, a plan of action was needed. The WQA has coordinated the cleanup efforts since its creation more than 30 years ago. As a result, 1.9 million acre-feet of water has been treated, thus making the region less dependent upon imported water.

2023 WQA Secures $10M in Federal Funding for the San Gabriel Basin Restoration Fund for Fiscal Year 2023.

2022 WQA Secures $10M for the San Gabriel Basin Restoration Fund and AB 2163 extends the WQA's sunset date to July 1, 2050.

2021 WQA secures $35.3M in Prop. 68 funding.

2020 WQA secures additional $2.2M in Prop. 1 funding.

2019 Construction begins on the first reverse osmosis treatment system in the San Gabriel Valley.

2018 WQA advocates for the passage of Proposition 68.

2014 WQA acquires the General Discharge Permit needed to continue the cleanup.

2012 WQA secures $10 million in state funding for four projects.

2009 WQA obtains additional $50 million for WQA Restoration Fund. H.R. 910, which established the San Gabriel Basin Restoration Fund to facilitate groundwater cleanup, became Public Law 106-554.

2002 The first 15-year BPOU project agreement is executed.

1999 WQA spearheads legislation for $75 million in federal funding.

1995 WQA's first treatment facility is completed in Monrovia.

1994 WQA adopts a consensus approach to integrating water supply and cleanup programs.

1993 WQA is established by the California State legislature.

1983 The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (U.S. EPA) declares four Superfund sites in portions of the Main San Gabriel Basin.

1979 Groundwater contamination is first detected in the San Gabriel Groundwater Basin.

CalEPA Secretary Yana Garcia

Focused on Climate Resiliency

By Elizabeth Smilor

"I envision climate resiliency as a state of being in which Californians can feel safe in the environment that surrounds them."

Yana Garcia
CalEPA Secretary

When Yana Garcia was named Secretary of California's Environmental Protection Agency a year ago, the state was in the midst of a historic drought. Today, temperatures are hot again but our reservoirs are full and water restrictions have been eased some.

Needless to say, climate and water supply resiliency are top of mind for the newest CalEPA Secretary.

"What we're seeing is that even our best models don't quite accurately predict the weather whiplash that we're experiencing. We're seeing hardship all across the board with floods and wildfires," said Garcia. "I envision climate resiliency as a state of being in which Californians can feel safe in the environment that surrounds them. That means that when we are facing wildfires, drought, floods and the like we are able to rapidly deploy emergency response and recovery resources that people can readily access and trust. It also means inherently that neither race nor income should determine relative access to that sense of safety and the ability to recover from increasingly frequent disasters."

Garcia, who was appointed last year as the first Latina CalEPA Secretary by Gov. Gavin Newsom, oversees the state's efforts to fight climate change, protect air and water quality, regulate pesticides and toxic substances, achieve the state's recycling and waste reduction goals, and advance environmental justice.

Yana Garcia was named CalePA Secretary in August 2022. Above, she is sworn in by Gov. Gavin Newsom as her father Sergio Garcia holds the California Constitution and looks on. Garcia will lead state efforts to combat climate change, improve air and water quality, regulate toxic substances and more.

"Yana's deep connection to communities, her strong track record as an environmental attorney in holding polluters accountable, and her commitment to bringing diverse interests together make her uniquely matched to the challenges facing California," said Gov. Newsom in announcing her appointment.

Gov. Gavin Newsom

California's water supply strategy, released the same month Garcia's appointment, aims to help California prepare for a possible 10 percent long-term reduction in our water supply by 2040. "That is still a goal worth achieving," said Garcia. "While storage may come to mind immediately for a lot of folks as a way to get us there, we need to keep our focus on conserving water through better land use practices and meeting efficiency standards."

The state has also invested over $8 billion to enhance the state's water resilience. The plan to modernize water infrastructure includes investments in storage, recycling, desalination, stormwater capture and conservation.

"Despite the heavy rain and snowpack we're seeing now, we always have to be ready for drought, and we have to remain vigilant of water quality impacts caused by the prevalence of contaminants. The less water we have, the more potent the impact of those contaminants."

As head of CalePA, Garcia oversees the California Air Resources Board (CARB), the Department of Pesticide Regulation (DPR), the Department of Resources Recycling and Recovery (CalRecycle), the Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC), the Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment (OEHHA), and the State Water Resources Control Board (SWRCB). She recognizes the importance of partnering with each of these departments and following through on commitments promised with tangible and beneficial results.

"Ultimately, we have to increase access to critical resources," she said. "We do that through comprehensive partnerships, not only with our government colleagues but also through effective partnerships with community-based organizations who really have the trust of so many hard-to-reach residents. It is also important that we retain transparency in our decision-making processes and that we deliver on our responsibility to protect and enhance the environment and the health of all Californians."

[See Yana Garcia, Page 40]

Garcia, who served from 2021 to 2022 as Special Assistant Attorney General to California Attorney General Rob Bonta, is nationally known for her work to uplift the voices of those from disadvantaged communities. In her tenure as an Assistant and Deputy Secretary at CalEPA she led three Environmental Justice Task Force Initiatives in the communities of Pomona, Imperial County and Stockton. She also led the program that delivered more than $1 million in Environmental Justice Small Grants to 28 organizations to combat pollution, improve health outcomes and increase public engagement in some of California's most pollution-burdened communities. That program has now grown to a multi-year $20 million investment program to increase capacity in some of the state's most pollution burdened areas.

"One of biggest lessons I learned early in my career is that all too often communities, particularly low-income communities and communities color, are faced with this false choice between economic growth and stability and access to clean, safe jobs and environmental quality," she said. "Our communities deserve both. I tend to approach decisions by taking a big step back from the notion that economic growth should come at the cost of environmental quality and health, or vice versa."

Garcia is proud of her accomplishments on the environmental justice front because she's witnessed the movement grow in power and influence in such arenas as drinking water quality, pollution and the oil and gas industry. Now, she is looking forward to crafting policy implementation strategies with a wide array of stakeholders.

"It's so important to notice who is at the decision-making table, and who is absent. My experience has been focused on marginalized communities who have all too often been left out," Garcia said. "But I'm equally committed to understanding where we may have a business perspective lacking or that of any stakeholder who is necessary in finding a particular solution."

In tackling the state's water supply challenges, Garcia aims to strike a balance between interests to protect the environment, human health and economic growth in the many regions of the state from rural to urban.

"I think municipal entities, water agencies, technology drivers, workforce developers, and more are really helpful in developing the kind of water solutions that we're going to need and in managing our water supply to deliver drinking water that's safe, clean and affordable to all Californians," she said. "We need to be able to capture water in these wet weather events through groundwater recharge and stormwater capture in our urban communities in order to build our resiliency for some of the drier weather events that we know will come despite the wet weather we've had recently." ○

City of Artesia

AREA: 1.6 SQUARE MILES

Artesia is a city in southeast Los Angeles County. It was incorporated on May 29, 1959 and is one of Los Angeles County's Gateway Cities. Artesia is surrounded on the west, south, and east sides by Cerritos, with Norwalk to the north. Artesia is the home of the East West Ice Palace, an ice rink which is co-owned by Michelle Kwan. It was also the childhood home of former First Lady Pat Nixon, who lived there from 1914 to 1931.

City of Avalon

AREA: 2.9 SQUARE MILES

Avalon, or Avalon Bay, is the only incorporated city on Santa Catalina Island. It was first settled in pre-modern times by members of the Gabrielino/Tongva tribe. In the late 19th century to the early 20th century, several developers unsuccessfully tried to develop Avalon into a resort destination community. In 1919, William Wrigley, Jr. gained control and oversaw much of the development of Avalon, including the construction of the landmark Catalina Casino.

City of Azusa

AREA: 9.7 SQUARE MILES

The city of Azusa is sometimes assumed to be a compaction of the phrase "everything from A to Z in the USA" from an old Jack Benny joke, but the place name "Azusa" traces back to at least the 18th century. Azusa originally referred to the San Gabriel Valley and river, and likely derives from the Tongva place name Asuksagna. The first Western settlement in Azusa consisted of a three-mile land grant from the Mexican Government to Luis Arenas in 1841.

DID YOU KNOW?

When Spanish explorers first entered the area now known as Hollywood, Native Americans were living in the canyons of the Santa Monica Mountains. Before long, the Indians had been moved to missions and the land which Hollywood now occupies was divided in two by the Spanish Government. Acreage to the west became part of Rancho La Brea and settlements to the East became Rancho Los Feliz.

City of Baldwin Park

AREA: 6.8 SQUARE MILES

Baldwin Park began as part of cattle grazing land belonging to the San Gabriel Mission. It eventually became part of the Rancho Azusa de Dalton and the Rancho La Puente properties. By 1906 it changed to Baldwin Park. In 1956 Baldwin Park became the 47th incorporated city in the State of California. Baldwin Park is home to the first In-N-Out burger stand, opened on October 22, 1948. It was the first drive-thru in California.

City of Bell

AREA: 2.6 SQUARE MILES

Bell was incorporated in 1927. The area has a Native American history dating back thousands of years. Among the early Spanish settlers was the Lugos, one of California's first families. While stationed at Mission San Antonio de Padua near Salinas, California, Francisco Lugo's first California son was born and became Don Antonio Maria Lugo, Spanish aristocrat and soldier, who settled on 30,000 acres of land that encompasses what is now the city of Bell.

DID YOU KNOW?

Historic Olvera Street started out as a short lane called Wine Street. In 1877, the street was extended and its name changed to Olvera Street in honor of Agustin Olvera, who owned a home at the end of the street across from the Plaza. He was the first county judge of Los Angeles.

City of Bell Gardens

AREA: 2.5 SQUARE MILES

Bell Gardens is notable for being one of only five Los Angeles County cities to permit casino gambling. Bell Gardens has a Native American history dating back thousands of years. In the late 18th century, when the area was associated with a large amount of land situated along the lower basin of the Rio Hondo area in Los Angeles County, Bell Gardens was once a bustling agricultural center. In 1927, Firestone Tire Company bought some of the land at $7,000 an acre.

City of Bellflower

AREA: 6.2 SQUARE MILES

Bellflower is a suburb of Los Angeles and incorporated on September 3, 1957. The city derives its name from the bellefleur apple, which was grown in local orchards during the early 1900s. Originally settled by small communities of dairy farmers of Dutch, Japanese, and Portuguese descent, Bellflower and neighboring Paramount served first as the apple and later the milk production centers for Southern California.

A GUIDE TO YOUR

1 Your Pipes. The pipe that connects your home or business to the sewer in the street is known as a sewer lateral. The owner of the home or business is responsible for maintaining the sewer pipes within the home or business and the sewer lateral.

If there is an overflow from your plumbing fixtures (e.g., toilet, sink, shower drain), stop using your water immediately and contact a licensed plumber (or the property owner). You may also need to contact a specialized clean-up service to help remove spilled sewage and disinfect property that came in contact with sewage.

2 Local Sewers. Local sewers transport sewage from neighborhood homes and businesses to larger, regional sewers. Your city (or other public agency) maintains these local sewers.

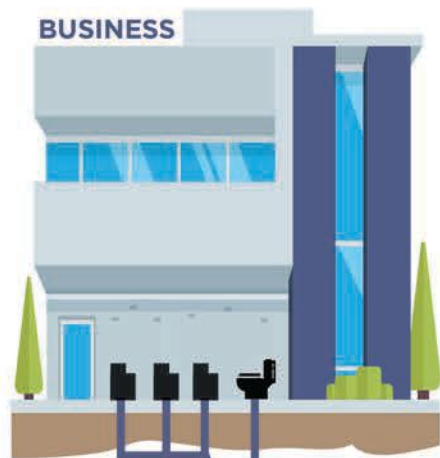

If you suspect a problem with a local sewer, please contact one of the following who are available 24/7:

- In City of Los Angeles: 213-485-7575 (LA Sanitation)
- Other cities in LA County: see www.lacsd.org/overflow for contact information
- Unincorporated LA County: 626-458-4357 (LA County Public Works)

SEWER SYSTEM

3 Regional Sewers. The regional sewer system transports sewage from local sewers to a treatment plant. In the City of Los Angeles, these regional sewers are maintained by LA Sanitation. Otherwise, the regional sewers are maintained by Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts and can be reached at 562-437-6520 (24/7).

When you call about a sewer overflow, please provide the following information:

- The address where the overflow is occurring or nearest cross streets.
- The time the overflow started or the time when the overflow was first noticed.
- Whether the overflow is ongoing or, if known, when the overflow stopped.
- Estimated area of the overflow (e.g., 10 feet long by 3 feet wide).

City of Calabasas

AREA: 12.9 SQUARE MILES

Calabasas is located in the hills west of the San Fernando Valley and is in the northwest Santa Monica Mountains. The city was formally incorporated as an independent city in 1991. The Leonis Adobe, an adobe structure in Old Town Calabasas, dates from 1844 and is one of the oldest buildings in the greater Los Angeles area. It is generally accepted that Calabasas is derived from the Spanish calabaza meaning "pumpkin," "squash," or "gourd".

City of Carson

AREA: 18.9 SQUARE MILES

Carson is about 14 miles away from the Los Angeles International Airport. Incorporated on February 20, 1968, Carson is the youngest municipality in the South Bay. Carson experiences a warm-summer Mediterranean climate, with noticeably cooler temperatures during the summer due to the close proximity of the Pacific Ocean. Rainfall is very scarce during the summer in Carson, but receives just enough rainfall throughout the year to be a semi-arid climate.

City of Cerritos

AREA: 8.9 SQUARE MILES

Cerritos is one of the Gateway Cities. Incorporated in 1956 Cerritos is a prime example of the "fiscalization" of California politics after the tax revolt of the 1970s and the passage of Proposition 13. The only way for California cities to raise long-term tax revenue in light of Prop 13 was to create as many commercial zones as possible. Cerritos was one of the first cities to develop large-scale retail zones, such as the Los Cerritos Center and Cerritos Auto Square.

City of Claremont

AREA: 13.5 SQUARE MILES

Much of what Claremont is today is the direct result of actions taken by the community's founders more than 100 years ago. Trees planted at the turn of the century now compete with nearby mountain peaks for dominance of the local skyline. The Claremont Colleges have become some of the nation's most highly respected educational and cultural institutions. The historic central core remains a vital residential and retail district.

City of Covina

AREA: 7.0 SQUARE MILES

Covina is a small city about 22 miles east of downtown Los Angeles, in the San Gabriel Valley region. The city's slogan, "One Mile Square and All There" was coined when the incorporated area of the city was only one square mile, making it the smallest city in area in the country. Covina is often confused with West Covina which is actually larger in both area and population, located to its south and westside.

City of Culver City

AREA: 5.1 SQUARE MILES

Culver City is mostly surrounded by the city of Los Angeles, but also shares a border with unincorporated areas of Los Angeles County. Over the years, considering its incorporated status, over forty annexations of adjoining areas have occurred. As a result the city now comprises about five square miles. Since the 1920s, Culver City has been a significant center for motion picture and later television production, in part because it was the home of MGM Studios.

City of Diamond Bar

AREA: 14.9 SQUARE MILES

Diamond Bar is named after the "diamond over a bar" branding iron registered in 1918 by ranch owner Frederick E. Lewis. Located at the junction of the Pomona and Orange freeways, Diamond Bar has the first hydrogen fueling station to be built in Southern California. Diamond Bar is one of only five cities statewide to make CNN Money Magazine's 2012 '100 Best Places to Live' list.

City of El Segundo

AREA: 5.5 SQUARE MILES

El Segundo, home to a population of more than 16,000 people and a number of Fortune 500 Corporate offices, was mostly uninhabited land used for dry farming. After a high point of activity during WWII many companies eventually transitioned into the aerospace/defense industry. In the 1960s, the addition of the Aerospace Company Corporation and the Los Angeles Air Force Base gave El Segundo claim to the title of The Aerospace Capital of the World.

City of Hawthorne

AREA: 6.1 SQUARE MILES

Hawthorne is in southwestern Los Angeles County. It is, like the rest of the Los Angeles basin, well known for its year-round pleasant Mediterranean climate enjoying plenty of sunshine throughout the year. On average, the warmest month is August and the coolest month is January. The maximum average precipitation occurs in February. Hawthorne is known to rock and roll fans as the home of Brian, Carl, and Dennis Wilson of the Beach Boys.

City of Huntington Park

AREA: 3.0 SQUARE MILES

Named for the prominent industrialist Henry Huntington, Huntington Park was incorporated in 1906 as a streetcar suburb for workers in the rapidly expanding industries to the southeast of downtown Los Angeles. Today, about 30% of its residents work at factories in nearby Vernon and Commerce. In parts of the film The Terminator, the Tiki Motel was filmed at an actual motel on Santa Fe Ave. The title character chases Kyle Reese and Sarah Connor on a motorcycle.

City of Industry

AREA: 12.1 SQUARE MILES

The City of Industry was designed for industry since the inception. Strategically located in the San Gabriel Valley adjacent to the Union Pacific Railroad and 60 Freeway, the city is home to over 3,000 businesses that employ over 70,000 employees, mostly from the San Gabriel Valley. It was incorporated on June 18, 1957. The City of Industry has no business taxes and is primarily funded through retail sales tax from shopping centers located within the city limits, and property tax on parcels within the City.

City of Inglewood

AREA: 9.1 SQUARE MILES

Inglewood is in the South Bay region of the greater Los Angeles area. The earliest residents of what is now Inglewood were indigenous people who used the natural springs in today's Edward Vincent Jr. Park (known for most of its history as Centinela Park). Local historian Gladys Waddingham wrote that these springs took the name Centinela from the hills that rose gradually around them and which allowed ranchers to watch over their herds.

City of La Cañada Flintridge

AREA: 8.6 SQUARE MILES

La Cañada Flintridge is a small and affluent city and ranks as the 143rd most expensive U.S. city to live in, with a median home price of $2,071,750. Part of the name for the city comes from the Spanish word cañada, meaning canyon, gorge, ravine. During the Spanish and Mexican eras, the area was known as Rancho La Cañada. Prior to the city's incorporation in 1976, the area consisted of two distinct communities, La Cañada and Flintridge.

City of La Puente

AREA: 3.5 SQUARE MILES

La Puente is in the eastern portion of Los Angeles County and is mostly flat. The city flower is the golden Hibiscus and the city colors are green and white. In 1769, the Gaspar de Portolà expedition built a bridge over the San Jose Creek. In 1884, the area was named Puente. The community began in 1841 when John Rowland and William Workman were granted the 48,000-acre Rancho La Puente. The area was known for its fruit and walnut groves during the 1930s.

City of La Verne

AREA: 8.6 SQUARE MILES

Founded in 1887 and incorporated in 1906, La Verne is nestled in the foothills of the San Gabriel - Pomona Valleys. It is situated approximately 35 miles east of Los Angeles and has a population of over 33,000. Although La Verne is located in metropolitan Los Angeles County, it is a close-knit community which has been able to retain its small town traditions and virtues. With eight mobile home parks and three large retirement communities, La Verne has a significant senior citizen population.

City of Lawndale

AREA: 2.0 SQUARE MILES

Lawndale was incorporated in 1959 and is in the South Bay region of the greater Los Angeles area. Since the 1780s, the area was part of the Rancho Sausal Redondo, a land grant given by the Spanish colonial government that includes much of what is now the South Bayshore region. After World War II, the immense demand for housing from returning veterans and California newcomers resulted in Lawndale's formation as a bedroom community.

City of Lomita

AREA: 1.9 SQUARE MILES

The word "lomita" is Spanish for "little knoll." Lomita was originally part of Rancho San Pedro, granted by the Spanish Empire to Juan Jose Dominguez by King Carlos III of Spain in 1784. Lomita established a sister city relationship with Takaishi, Osaka, Japan in October 1981. The city has a total area of 1.9 square miles, all of which is land, but originally spanned 7 square miles. Over time, much of this area was annexed by neighboring cities.

PROTECT YOUR PIPES!

Putting the wrong things down the drain can block your pipes and harm the environment. Here are a few pointers:

FATS, OILS & GREASE (FOG) CLOG PIPES

Fats, oils and grease can solidify in your pipes, causing blockages. Place these materials in a sealed container, let them cool and dispose in the trash.

WIPES CLOG PIPES

Wipes (including many labeled as flushable), paper towels, feminine hygiene products, plastics, etc., do not readily break down and can clog your pipes. Place them in the trash. Remember, only the 3 p's—pee, poo, and (toilet) paper—belong in the toilet.

BY PROTECTING YOUR PIPES, YOU PROTECT YOUR HOME, NEARBY SEWERS AND THE ENVIRONMENT

City of Lynwood

AREA: 4.8 SQUARE MILES

Named after "Lynn Wood", the wife of local dairyman and businessman Charles H. Sessions. Mr. Sessions played a key role in incorporating the City of Lynwood on July 16, 1921. In 1917 the Lynwood Company, which he founded, built the Lynwood Depot for the Pacific Electric Company and still remains. Today the Depot still stands tall! It was moved to Lynwood Park and it now serves as a History and Art Gallery operated by a local organization - The Lynwood Union.

Stop Wasting Fuel

Help Us Convert Food Waste into Green Energy

4,000 tons of food are thrown out every day in Los Angeles County—enough to fill the Rose Bowl twice a year. This waste takes up valuable landfill space and can harm the environment if not properly managed.

We convert this waste into a resource: biofuel.

For LA County cities wanting help in meeting state organic waste diversion requirements, we have the facilities and expertise to assist you.

City of Montebello

AREA: 8.4 SQUARE MILES

Montebello is in the southwestern area of the San Gabriel Valley east of downtown Los Angeles. In the early 20th century, Montebello was a well-known source for oil reserves. The Standard Oil Company discovered oil in the Montebello hills in 1917 on the Baldwin and Temple properties; this discovery changed the face of Montebello. What were formerly hills full of agriculture became oil fields.

City of Palmdale

AREA: 106.2 SQUARE MILES

Palmdale is a city located in the center of northern Los Angeles County. It was the first community within the Antelope Valley to incorporate as a city on August 24, 1962; 47 years later, in November 2009, voters approved creating a charter city. Palmdale is the 32nd most populous city in California and ranks 158th nationally. Over the last 25 years this city has consistently been ranked in the top 25 fastest growing cities in the United States.

1874 - Los Angeles gets its first streetcar. It's horse-drawn. The first electrified streetcars will debut in 1887.

City of Rolling Hills Estates

AREA: 3.6 SQUARE MILES

Rolling Hills Estates is on the northern side of the Palos Verdes Peninsula, facing Torrance. Rolling Hills Estates is mostly residential. Incorporated in 1957, Rolling Hills Estates tries to maintain a fairly bucolic character with a large number of horse paths. The history of Rolling Hills Estates actually dates back to the establishment of the first Spanish rancho land grant in California. It was Los Angeles County's 60th municipality, established on September 18, 1957.

City of San Gabriel

AREA: 4.1 SQUARE MILES

San Gabriel is named after the Mission San Gabriel Arcángel, founded by Junipero Serra. Today a center for culture and art, the Mission is the fourth of twenty-one California Missions. The city grew outward from the mission and in 1852 became the original township of Los Angeles County. San Gabriel was incorporated in 1913. The city's motto is "A city with a Mission" and it is often called the "Birthplace" of the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

City of San Marino

AREA: 3.8 SQUARE MILES

San Marino is an affluent city located in the San Rafael Hills. Incorporated in April 12, 1913, the city was designed by its founders to be uniquely residential, with expansive properties surrounded by beautiful gardens, wide streets, and well maintained parkways. Forbes Magazine ranked the city as the 63rd most expensive area to live in the United States. The city takes its name from the ancient Republic of San Marino, founded by Saint Marinus.

City of Santa Fe Springs

AREA: 8.9 SQUARE MILES

Santa Fe Springs is one of the Gateway Cities of southeast Los Angeles County. Santa Fe Springs is the birthplace of the Shelby Cobra. In 1962 Carroll Shelby set up shop in Dean Moon's speed shop in Santa Fe Springs. Shelby had AC Cars of Surrey, England, ship cars without a motor or drive train to the Santa Fe shop. Shelby shoe-horned a 260 cu. in. V8 into the tiny, light weight British roadster and the Cobra was born.

City of Sierra Madre

AREA: 3.0 SQUARE MILES

The Sierra Madre is located in the foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains below the southern edge of the Angeles National Forest. Pasadena and Altadena are to its west, Arcadia to its south and east. Sierra Madre is known as "Wisteria City", and its city seal is decorated with a drawing of the now widely known 500-foot vine. It is also called the "Village of the Foothills". The city is historically linked to the old mountain resorts of the San Gabriel Mountains and Valley.

City of Signal Hill

AREA: 2.2 SQUARE MILES

Signal Hill was incorporated on April 22, 1924. The hill that the city is named after is 365 feet above the surrounding town of Long Beach. Signal Hill changed forever when oil was discovered. On June 23, 1921, Shell Oil Company's Alamitos #1 well erupted. The gas pressure was so great the gusher rose 114 ft. in the air. Soon Signal Hill was covered with over 100 oil derricks, and because of its prickly appearance at a distance became known as "Porcupine Hill".

City of South Gate

AREA: 7.4 SQUARE MILES

South Gate is the 17th largest city in Los Angeles County. It is located 7 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles and is part of the Gateway Cities region of southeastern Los Angeles County. The city was named in 1918 after the South Gate Gardens on the Cudahy Ranch. The city was incorporated five years later, on January 20, 1923, using the shortened form of the name. The name refers to the city's being south of Los Angeles.

City of South Pasadena

AREA: 3.4 SQUARE MILES

The City of South Pasadena is a charming community, situated only six miles from downtown Los Angeles. Called the City of Trees (the streets are lined with numerous species of native California trees), South Pasadena is known for its stunning homes, unique small businesses, and top quality schools. "Mom and Pop" merchants populate the business district, and the Mission West area is a part of the original U.S. Route 66.

City of Torrance

AREA: 20.6 SQUARE MILES

Torrance is located in the South Bay region of Los Angeles County and was a city incorporated in 1921. It has 1.5 miles of shore-front beaches on the Pacific Ocean – quieter and less well known by tourists than others on the Santa Monica Bay, such as those of neighboring Redondo Beach and Manhattan Beach. Torrance enjoys a moderate year-round climate with warm temperatures, sea breezes, low humidity and an average rainfall of 12.55 inches per year.

City of Vernon

AREA: 5.2 SQUARE MILES

Vernon is five miles south of downtown Los Angeles and it is the smallest of any incorporated city in the state. The city is primarily composed of industrial areas and touts itself as "Exclusively Industrial." Consisting almost entirely of warehouses and factories, the city's main industries are food service manufacturing, metalworking, and manufacture of glass and plastic equipment. Vernon is the historic site where the Battle of La Mesa occurred on January 9, 1847.

DID YOU KNOW

Los Angeles County is the world's 19th largest economy.

City of Walnut

AREA: 9.0 SQUARE MILES

The history of Walnut dates back to the Indians who were of Shoshone origin. They were called Gabriellino Indians by the Spaniards because they lived in an area controlled by the San Gabriel Mission. Walnut was primarily used for the grazing of cattle and sheep by the Mission. Spaniards who arrived here in the early 1800s introduced the concept of ranchos and started agricultural development and the creation of home sites.

City of West Covina

AREA: 16.1 SQUARE MILES

West Covina is located 19 miles east of Downtown Los Angeles in the eastern San Gabriel Valley and is part of the Greater Los Angeles area. West Covina was incorporated as an independent city in 1923 to prevent the city of Covina from building a sewage farm in the area. West Covina began the second half of the 20th century with exciting new developments and projects, mostly brought on by big business.

City of West Hollywood

AREA: 1.9 SQUARE MILES

West Hollywood (sometimes referred to as WeHo) was incorporated on November 29, 1984. It is bordered on the north by the Hollywood Hills, on the east by the Hollywood district, on the south by the Fairfax district, and on the west by the city of Beverly Hills. The irregular border of the city, which is not very large in area, is highlighted in the city logo. West Hollywood benefits from a very dense, compact urban form with small lots, a mix of land uses, and a walkable street grid.

City of Westlake Village

AREA: 5.5 SQUARE MILES

Westlake Village is a planned community that is settled snugly in the northern foothills of the Santa Monica Mountains in western Los Angeles County. It is nine miles inland from the Pacific Ocean and 38 miles west of downtown Los Angeles. Occupying only 5.5 square miles, averaging 900 feet above sea level, the community is framed by the Simi Hills to the north and the Santa Monica Mountains to the south. Much of Westlake Village is surrounded by open space.

YOU KNOW

The Los Angeles' five-county area has a population of almost 20 million. It includes Los Angeles,
Riverside, Ventura, Orange and San Bernardino counties.

The Upper San Gabriel Valley Municipal Water District (Upper District) is a special district formed by the region's voters in December 1959 and was incorporated shortly afterward at its first public meeting on Jan. 7, 1960. For the past 63 years, Upper District has remained steadfast in supporting a high quality of life in the greater San Gabriel Valley by providing valued water services. As the region's wholesale water provider, Upper District services 26 water retailers, which encompasses 18 cities and nearly one million people in its 144 square mile service territory.

It is governed by a five-member elected board of directors and is a member agency to the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California. Upper District partners with many public and private agencies to provide a sustainable, high quality water supply. While its primary function is to provide imported water to supplement local water supplies, Upper District has evolved over the years to include recycled water, water stewardship and conservation in its water portfolio. Today, Upper District is widely recognized as community leader in water stewardship and water policy. ○

Our Vision

To support a high quality of life in the greater San Gabriel Valley by providing valued water services.

Our Mission

To consistently meet our region's need for reliable, high quality and affordable water.
